Red Attack on Dag Creates UN Crisis

PLANES TO RESCUE; 70 WHITES 'TRAPPED'

ELISABETHVILLE — The United Nations commandeered planes here today for an attempt to rescue 70 white persons reported trapped in the tin mining town of Manono by tribesmen inflamed with narcotics and liquor.

Twenty-two Belgians and 140 Congolese were flown from Manono to Elisabethville in three UN planes Wednesday night. Whites who remained behind later radioed an appeal for help.

Abuse of Power Charged to Police

OTTAWA (CP) - Special dangers are posed to civil liberties and human rights in Canada through a tendency toward police abuse of power and the Canadian treatment of would-be immigrants, a To-

And a Toronto law professor says certain lawyers have themselves violated rights and liberties of discriminating, for reasons of race or religion, against aspiring lawyers seeking to take their necessary articling apprenticeship.

The points were brought forth in papers prepared for discussion today by the Com-monwealth and Empire Law Conference. They were sub-mitted by F. Andrew Brewin, CCF national treasurer as well as a practising lawyer, and Prof. Bora Laskin, of the University of Toronto law faculty

The Next Move

NOW THAT THE BENNETT Government is firmly in office for another term, the public will expect some definite action on the electrical power problems that were blurred and distorted in a political campaign.

Two questions should be answered without delay: First, has an agreement on the Columbia River reached between Canada and the United States, as Ottawa reports indicate, and, if so, what does it involve? Second, is the Peace River scheme really going ahead and, if it is, where will its power be sold and how will it affect the Columbia?

As to the Columbia, it seems obvious that the final negotiations between Canada and the United States were postponed by the election. Mr. Bennett, who holds a veto over any international agreement, since he must grant the necessary water licence, has been much too busy in the last month or so to deal with the Columbia.

Presumably the interrupted bar gaining between Ottawa and Washington, with the Provincial Govern-ment as a potent third party, can now be pushed to a conclusion. The reasons for postponement and con-fusion have passed with the election. As to the Peace, the confusion remains and is even deeper than

Mr. Bennett assures the public that this gigantic scheme can and should go ahead simultaneously with the development of the Col-Mr. Howard Green and the Federal Government regard simultaneous construction as economical-

The only fact clearly established is that the Provincial Government intends to give no "special concessions" to the Wenner-Gren promoters but is prepared to give them a water licence which is a concession worth vast sums of money, and sure to produce perpetual private profits, if this franchise can be used to finance construction of dams and

It is for the promoters to find the money when they have not yet found customers for their relatively expensive power. Can they do that? is time now for them to reveal their real plans, as presumably they must when they apply to the Public Utilities Commission for their licence. They must soon fish or bait. For surely the Provincial Government does not intend to grant them a water licence and allow them to hold it indefinitely until, some day, they can raise money for actual work.

Mr. Bennett may say that he has received at the polls a mandate for his Peace River policy of private ownership by the Wenner-Gren promoters. Clearly he has not.

Though he has won a substantial victory at the polls and the unquestioned right to govern British Col-umbia, it cannot be said that a majority of the people approved the Peace River deal when only about 40 per cent of them approved the Government Government. Anyway, in the confusions of the political campaign the LOOSE ENDS people had no chance to express their views on any specific question like Peace River power and voted on the general issue of free enterprise versus socialism.

In the light of these events, and its minority vote, the Government will be wise to take another of its famous second looks at the whole Peace question, ask itself again whether a waterpower of such huge potential value should be handed over to any private corporation and also whether its development should not be postponed until the Columbia project is completed, as Mr. Green has urged. No one will think the less of Mr. Bennett, most people will think the more of him, if he has second thoughts on such a vital and complex matter.

and the northern seats around the Peace River safely won, he will now As Mr. Reston give his full co-operation to the Federal Government in assuring an early start on the Columbia. He may think he has given that co-operation already. The Federal Government does not.

As Mr. Green says, we cannot allow provincial politics, or the Peace River scheme, or anything else to stand in the way of a Columbia agreement or otherwise the Americans may abandon the whole scheme in disgust and make their own thermal power. If that happen-ed our loss of cheap downstream benefits would be irrevocable and disastrous. No Canadian govern-ment national or provincial, would care to bear the responsibility for that disaster.

Possession of nuclear bombs by that country, already the master of more manpower than any other nation, could make current nuclear problems seem mild in comparison.

There is reason to believe that that day may not be far distant.

Japanese sources have recently noted the progress of Red China towards nuclear strength. The march began in 1954, when Peking signed an agreement with Moscow for scientific and technical co-operation. Since then there have been numerous formal agreements on nuclear work between the two

The contests should be highly interesting as an index of trends in Britain. Labor, experiencing internal trouble as the rift deepens between Mr. Gaitskell's moderates and the left wing, may be expected to drop some votes to a reform party untroubled by "family" dis-sension. Moreover, the Liberals ex-pect to attract some Conservative that party as well as some of the Party policies.

Perhaps these hopes are excessive. Yet the division in the Labor Party seems to favor the Liberals. If Labor's left prevails, there is no assurance that the moderates will remain in the fold. If they leave, where could they go? The Liberals suggest they have the answer for that question.

One of the particularly im-ortant tests will be held in Ebbw Vale, the late Aneurin Bevan's constituency. Mr. Bevan was returned election after election with thumping majorities. The voting ahead should prove to what extent the Bevan following was attracted by his personality, to what extent otes from disgruntled members of it reflected endorsement of Labor

How does this perspective hear on the issue of African unity? Does it mean that Africans must accept as definitive the borders and the groupings which resulted from the quite arbitrary decisions of European colonial rulers? It certainly does not follow from this argument that African unity is to be ruled out. What does follow are these two observations.

Important Lesson

There is an important lesson for Africa in the experience of postwar Europe, in this respect. In the immediate postwar years, there was some tendency, notably in France and Italy, to say that effective recovery awaited the achievement of a higher degree of European unity.

As things turned out, the Common Market only became feasible in Europe after all the European nations, including France and Italy, had largely mastered their local problems of reconstruction, on a local basis.

The right way for Africa is to get The right way for Africa is to get on with the tasks of modernization at high priority while exploring soberly the proper basis and proper forms for larger political or economic units.

The second observation about African unity is that African leaders should give careful thought to the underlying basis and purposes for unity.

Evidently this question of Sunday sport is going to be a major issue in the near future. Having been exposed to instant coffee and more recently, to instant tea I thought it would be interesting to sample some instant beer, and also to find out when it would be on the market here and abroad.

But when I contacted the Bass people I was told the news items were "ridiculous" and "mainly conjecture." Yes, they did have and mainly conjecture. Yes, they did have an instant beer in its "experimental stages," but apart from that—no comment. With further questioning such an air of mystery developed that I was made to feel like someone quizzing the War Office on atomic Eventually I reached Mr. K. B. Howkins, of Bass' sales department, who seems to be Spokesman-in-Charge-of-No-Comment as re-

I said I supposed that could be regarded as fair comment, but let's be explicit-let's go through the story point by point, and he could tell me where they were wrong. "No comment," said Mr. Howkins.

Faced with that sort of brick wall, the only thing is to try to go round it. I got in touch with the Shaw Saville shipping line, on whose ship Southern Cross instant beer was tried out on both crew and passengers.

But all I could get from them was the sort of comment a man makes about the tie his wife's mother gave him for Christmas— "it was favorably received." They said they were in the shipping business and any talk of beer must come from Bass.

The key to the whole thing, I have now learned from non-Bass brewery chemists, is that the big stumbling block to producing a beer concentrate has always been that you can squash beer down only so much—to a third of its volume—and beyond that the vital yeast cells can't live.

There's no trick at all to making a very strong beer of which you would pour out a third of a glassful and top up with twothirds of soda water to get the equivalent of an ordinary glass of beer. But who would bother with all that rigmarole? You'd just drink it strong and like it.

(Sid Fuller, news director of radio station KFI in Los Angeles, spent his vacation on Vancouver Island

Now he is back on the job and last Friday devoted his broadcast on the Cadillac Cavalcade of News to his visit. Here, in the text, he recounts his holiday memories. In an accompanying letter he says Los Angeles still has its smog and appeals for a bottle of fresh Victoria air so he won't forget what it's like.)

By SID FULLER

For a week now, since returning to the forcing elamor of the vast city where we live and work, life has been the slow awakening from a dream.

All around are the sights and sounds we have known so well and for so long; the prodding pressures that drive the urban creature to pride ful effort. The familiar compulsions again lay hold on the will and the body with impatient and compelling urgency, but somewhere, deep in the spirit of the returning prodigal there are areas of perceptive recall beyond the reach of mundane drives.

And there, we do believe, is the sweet magic of vacation. The close-focused and narrowed horizons of the commonplace are nolled outward and away toward new dimensions of time and distance and

Does Queen Get Weary?

We wonder if Queen Victoria doesn't get tired, standing as she does on her tall stone pedestal on the greenly-green parliament lawn, gazing out over the Inner Harbor. (At that, she has a firmer footing than poor George Vancouver who, all dressed up in gold, has to perch precariously atop the great copper dome above and behind her, but that's what he gets for the morning, then entertained his friends at lunch around We wonder if the hostlers have groomed and fed and the same room for a meeting We wonder if the hostiers that same board, and then used have groomed and fed and the same room for a meeting stabled the patient, placid of the provincial parliament in horses that pull the big taily the evening. Children Shone Bannisters

We wonder if it's true that the bannisters of iron-hard arbutus wood on the staircase of the 107-year-old manor house at Craigflower were really polished to mirror brightness by the backsides of the youngsters of the Kenneth MacKenzie who built the great house in 1853. That, too, was a good story and, no doubt, a likely one, so we believed it...

We wonder if the ghost of Captain Cy Peck still haunts the wheelhouse of the busy little story-book ferry that salis from Swartz Bay in the morning and for eight hours noses through the winding channels from Gulf Island to Gulf, is land. He was a doughty man, Cy Peck, and had a Victoria Cross to prove it. And to this day the outport islanders come down to the wharf at Port Washington and Fulford and Ganges and Saturn's and services. We wonder if it's true that Whaler's Bay when the ferry's

By JIMMY CANNON

PITTSBURGH-It is supposed to be the same game no matter where you play it. No one in baseball believes that, but they always tell it to the kids. They hand them the ticket and advise them to be patient. You'll be back, they explain to the people going down to the minors, just keep hustling and you can't miss. It is generally a lie and the young guys doubt it but they pretend

But Rocky Nelson, who alternates at first base for the Pirates with Dick Stuart, accepts all the myths of his sport. He should know better because he is 35 and that's very old for a man in his field. Being a baseball player is all he wants to be. The towndoesn't count. He has made a living as one for 18 years and he is grateful for that: There is pity in him for ball players who are forced to work at meaner occupa ROCKY NELSON tions. It is his contention hat it is a privilege to serve his selfish sport. After eight unsuccessful tries, Nelson is finally a big leaguer with Pittsburgh. And he forgives all those who sent him down. They brought him up to stay after 18 years and Rocky Nelson knew it had to happen even as far back as '42 when he broke in with Johnson City.

The great reward for Rocky Nelson is being a ball player. That's all that matters. He is a lucky man because he draws wages for what never is work. It was fun no matter where they sent him and that includes Lynchburg

He thinks of the other guys who dropped out. He held on and they didn't and the obscurity of factory and farm claimed them. He persisted and that's what a ball player is expected to do. It was a long wait, but, just so they allow him to play baseball some place, you'll hear no squawks from Rocky Nelson.

It got to be a gag. He would have a good year in Triple A and they would bring him up. It generally didn't last long. In Brooklyn Gil Hodges was the first baseman. No one could push Stan Musial off first when Nelson belonged

No one ever gets used to it. But Rocky Nelson handled No one ever gets used to it. But Rocky Nelson handled is better than most. It was as if every season was his first. They couldn't turn him cynical. He would act like it never happened before when the travelling secretary gave him the ticket. The manager would con him about sending for him later in the season and Rocky Nelson would pack his bag and make the next plane. You do it often enough, it should leave you empty. But Rocky Nelson fought it off and make the heat hand. For the leave you empty. But Rocky Nelson fought it off and played ball where they put him.

"This is a game you like to play," Rocky Nelson has said often, "and you get paid for it."

It astonishes him when reporters attempt to angle a piece about how he has been abused. They don't know what goes on inside a guy when he gets a hit or makes the good play. That is what keeps a man going. The feeling is the same in Johnson City or Pittsburgh. You have to be a ball player to know that. It is not just wearing the uniform and player to know that. It is not just wearing the uniform and thaving a locker in the clubhouse or getting your name in the box-score. Coming up and the trips down are part of being a ball player, too, but you keep the good days forever.

He has no use for the criers who fog it when it gets a little tough. You are a ball player or you're not and, once you make the choice, you should give it up if you hold back.

"If you don't like the game," Nelson says, "you ought to get another toh."

get another job."

He has never worked at anything else because he played winters in the Cuban League and that was also kicks because it's baseball. He knows how cruel it is, but that's also part of it. 25 men are all a team can carry, and managers can't

They expected him to last a month or so when the Pirates drafted him in '58 from Toronto where he hit .320. But this time Rocky Nelson made it. He is a big leaguer now although it took him from '48 until last year to qualify for a pension. All the years are worth this one as he helps the Pirates move closer to their first pennant in the buyer will see his choice at the end of a busy summer, before a winter's face-lifting, and be able to judge for himself whether she has been taken care of or neglected. The boat also can be water-tested, right now, rather than after elaborate and inconvenient rounding up of fresh batteries, fuel, this, that, and the other thing needed to get a boat moving after a lay-up.

Once the boat is found, there is Once the boat is found, there is plenty of time to make the inveitable alterations, such as engine replacement, interior refinishing, and painting. If a yard is to do the work it might do it for less than during the rush period next spring, and if the owner plans to do his own work, he has all winter ahead of him.

Choice, too, is wider in the fall, and there is more time available to get exactly the right boat.

There are a few points that must be considered if one is to make a successful purchase of a new boat.

For instance, a boat carrying the name of a reputable and well-known builder will have more resale value than a backyard job. It also be likely to be a standard, popular model. Unusual craft may be fun to look at and own for a while, but they are difficult to sell later on. One of the best ways to find the right boat is to read the classified ads in the newspapers, and even run one may also contact yacht brokers, yacht and boating clubs, and boat yards for possible purchases

SINGLE LANDMARK IDENTIFIES VICTORIA OF 70 YEARS AGO WITH MODERN CITY

given way to modern service station, Belmont Building, and stone Causeway seen at right. Sole point of similarity is bell tower of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, with its four spires looming over skyline in both cases. Canoes have given way to plastic motorboats, and men wear sport shirts and slacks instead of bowler hats and sturdy, long-wearing, furiously hot black suits. But most of all, imagine consternation if a pretty girl in halter and shorts were to walk from yachts at right onto landing at left. B.C. Archives dated picture by construction of St. Andrew's in early 1890's and replacing of wooden bridge with stone in early 1900s. Photographer of old picture is not known, but Bill Halkett of Times took modern shot.

City Men Find DEW Line Becoming 'All Canadian'

Camsell Survey Will Change Maps of Arctic

By NORMAN CRIBBENS The DEW line in far northern Canada is fast becoming an all-Canadian operation and less of a United States enter-

Authority for this is Thomas McCulloch, of 2452 Camelot, Saanich - hydrographic surveyor for the federal government-who returned here Monday aboard the Victoria icebreaker CGS Camsell.

"There are not nearly so many American airmen up there as formerly," Mr. Mc-Culloc's said. "It is fast becom ing an all-Canadian show."

Mr. McCulloch, with Robert Weinberg, of 3040 Admirals, went to the Canadian Arctic aboard the Camsell to carry out hydrographic surveys for the federal government.

"This was done, not only for defence purposes, but to facilitate the work of commercial companies such as the Hudson's Bay, who deliver up north."

They used an instrument known as the tellurometer—an electronic machine which measures the distances between two points with almost uncanny accuracy.

Change In Control

"I was working for Canada," he said, "and the United States was working with us. It was all part of the North American defence set-up.

"The United States Air Force used to control the DEW line operation." Oday it is very different—the DEW line is now a Canadian operation."

The SMLTS production will sell to Ceylon as many planes as it needs for civil aviation. The cast includes Erith Smith, on an easy, long-term credit or alternatively on a barter basis, Transport Minister P. G. Kaludra Pigott, Frank he welcomed the offer and his ministry would examine the details.

LEADING ROLES in the three-act play, "Night Was Our Friend," which will be presented tonight, Friday and Saturday by St. Luke's Players, are being taken by vivacious, brunette Belle Davies and well-known man of many talents, John Drean. The play which has its suspenseful moments is nevertheless not a whodunit according to its director, Harry Lukey. Performances will take place at St. Luke's Hall. Curtain is at 8.15.

Several of my readers have written recently to priate to show one while I am on the while I am on the general subject of finessing.

Defending against four spades East cashes the ace and king of hearts and shifts to the king of diamonds. South has a lay down for 10 tricks, but there is no reason why he shouldn't go for 11 if he can do so with safety and the trump finesse gives him complete safety and the play for the overtrick.

All South has to do is to win that first diamond and pick up trumps with one lead.

Opening lead—♥ 2

SCALP TREATMENT

Sao Yarrow Bidg. (Est. 1918.)

Leads a trump to dummy and discards his losing dia mond on the jack of clubs. If East ducks South discards the diamond immediately and still makes that overtrick.

PLOWING, ROTOVATING 18 gan and Piano Lessons. Private $2.20 instruction in EATON'S Music Studio

NONETHELESS, the hand-made concoction kept one from falling asleep and waiting reasonably anxiously for the next act to get underway. And more in 1917's film drama about the Russian Revolung EATON'S rents, sells, repairs and tunes Hammond Organs and all makes of pianos. that, surely, is all that can be expected from weekly television drama.

Best of all, the original germ could have sprouted. Many a happily married and successful businessman like Alan Patterson has been hounded by a simple-minded girl who it determined that they should be lovers. Before long his wife is suspicious and the marriage hangs by a thread.

However not often — if ever — is the man unfortunate to have a junior clerk in his office who is a psycho. And if he has the odds are unlikely that he will pick out the boss' would be girl friend to murder.

will pick out the boss' would be girl friend to murder. But, I suppose, these are the frail girders about which TV drama is woven.

Leslie Neilsen portrayed the worried Patterson effectively. Also seen to good advantage were George Grizzard, Natalie Trundy and Diane Foster. It was produced by Canadian Fletcher Markle.

Naw to wait for next week's "Thriller." Will it

Tall into the abyss? Or will it be hurled there by the American critics?

All around are the sights and sounds we have known so well and for so long; the prodding pressures that drive the urban creature to pride ful effort. The familiar compulsions again lay hold on the will and the body with impatient and compelling urgency, but somewhere, deep in the spirit of the returning prodigal there are areas of perceptive recall beyond the reach of mundane drives.

And there, we do believe, is the sweet magic of vacation. The close focused and narrowed horizons of the commonplace are rolled outward and away toward new dimensions of time and distance and standards along the streets...

Does Queen Get Weary?

We wonder if Queen Victoria doesn't get tired, standing as she does on her tall stone pedestal on the greenly-green parliament lawn, gazing out over the Inner Harbor. (At that, she has a firmer footing than poor George Vancouver who, all dressed up in gold, has to perch precariously atop the great copper dome above and behind her, but that's what he gets for giving the island his name.)

United Nations Faces Crisis UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)-The United States said today that if the UN effort in The Congo fails under Soviet subversion of it there "will be no alternative to unilateral action by many parties." U.S. Ambassador James J.

U.S. Ambassador James J. Wadsorth pledged fullest support to the United Nations and Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold, who Wednesday night was subjected to a violent denunciation by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin. Wadsworth called Zorin's attack "slander."

"The historic UN action in the Congo is at the crossroads." Wadsworth said. "Under attack by the Soviet Union, it must be supported.

"If the UN action by many parties with all the implications this would have for Africa. "If the UN action succeeds, and for its part the United States is doing everything it can do to that end, a major crisis will have been averted largely through the efforts of the Africans themselves — working through the United Nations."

Reviewing Russia's effort to undermine the UN Congo effort, in a speech to the Security Council, Wadsworth conwilling.

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo — Angry Congolese troops tried to attack Premier Patrice Lumumba today and sent him fleeing to United Nations forces for protection.

The prime minister was asked by reporters as he entered a cabinet meeting for comment on speculation that Mr. Flemming, 61, may enter the federal cabinet. He replied:

"That's an interesting situation and one in respect of the second process."
